

The Lorikeet Breeding Center

A Historic Step For The Future of Endangered Wildlife

But hope always finds a way!

From England, the lorikeet has returned to its true home: Bali. Through the collaboration of Taman Safari Indonesia, the Ministry of Forestry, Bali BKSDA, World Parrot Trust, and Paradise Park.

For years, the Red-breasted Lorikeet's voice was missing.

Illegal trade and habitat loss pushed them to the brink of extinction, leaving Bali and Lombok's forests silent.

Now, the Lorikeet Breeding Center at Taman Safari Bali stands as more than a facility.

It is a bridge back to the wild, so that one day, Bali and Lombok's forests will once again echo with their song.

From the UK, across continents and oceans, to a safe place at Bali Safari Park, where they can rest and prepare for life in the wild again.

Here, hope begins with “Galih” and “Arya.”
Two lorikeets, symbols of love and a sustainable future.

Their story is just the beginning.

Share this journey, and let's bring back the voices of the wild together.
